Shultz is among dignitaries

A stream of mourners including Secretary of State Shultz paid their respects in Long Island yesterday to former CIA Director William Casey, the spymaster, lawyer and presidential adviser who died this week.

A wake for Casey, 74, who died Wednesday of pneumonia, was held at his estate in exclusive Roslyn Harbor, a

Tudor-style mansion on six acres off busy Glenwood Road.

A security force of CIA and Secret Service agents and Nassau County police screened visitors at the gate to the property, which borders on a golf course and the harbor. ~~Respect was~~ barred.

Shultz, his wife and more than 100 other visitors were greeted at the door by Casey's widow, Sophia, and his only child, Bernadette Smith.

Open casket

Flowers were delivered to the house, where Casey's body was on view in an open casket in the parlor.

Shultz arrived in a motorcade at 1:30 p.m. and stayed 20 minutes before returning to Washington.

Other dignitaries were expected in Long Island today, the second day of the wake, and for his funeral Mass at 1:45 p.m. tomorrow at St.

Mary's Catholic Church in Roslyn Harbor.

President Reagan is to attend the Mass at St. Mary's, a small, brick-front church on a hill overlooking the harbor. The church seats about 340, and attendance is expected to be by invitation only.

Casey, an adviser to Presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Reagan, headed the Central Intelligence Agency for six years. He died six months after surgery to remove a malignant brain tumor.

On Feb. 2, almost two months after surgery, he resigned as CIA chief under a cloud of questions about the spy agency's role in the Iran-Contra scandal. His death left many questions unanswered.
